Niantic Labs, the company behind the critically acclaimed mobile game Pokémon GO, has just posted a new update for its game. The update, version 0.86.9001, is currently available to download for iOS and Android users. Players will be able to view the full release notes. According to the official post, the biggest change to the update is the fact that users will now be able to add their Pokemon onto a Gym, after connecting with their Nintendo Switch. The original version of Pokémon GO required players to create a free Niantic account in order to download the game. Many considered this move as a way for Niantic to make money off those with accounts, but this version of the game doesn't ask users for any personal details. Players who do wish to create an account will be required to create a username, but this doesn't mean that they have to link their account to the app. Those who choose to create an account will be able to download the game regardless of whether they have an account on Google's Play Store or Apple's App Store, and they won't need to use their own credit card or debit card for the process. Those who choose not to create an account will still be able to download the game, but they won't be able to add any additional Pokémon to a Gym, and they won't have any special bonuses for any special events. Today's new update also fixes a few bugs in the game, including one that caused the UI to stop working when players were using their phones while driving. This has been fixed, and Niantic assures players that the game will still display the screen when they pull over and stop their car. Released only on June 12, 2018 for both Android and iOS, Pokémon GO is the first augmented reality game from Nintendo. It has since become a very popular phenomenon around the world, after reaching over 200 million players in its first week of release. This new update from Niantic Labs puts the game on equal footing with some of the most popular games in the world, including Fortnite and Call of Duty. ... Utilizing the augmented reality technique, the game allows players to "catch" virtual Pokémon and collect them in a real-world setting. In fact, the game's popularity has grown so quickly that many people have reported being threatened by players while playing. The fear often comes about when the player believes someone is going to steal their virtual Pokémon, however, this new update doesn't have
